Dear Porsche enthusiasts,

We are now only a short week away from a momentous occasion, the Asia Premiere of the new Porsche 911 at the Auto Guangzhou. I hope you share my excitement for a car that exemplifies the Porsche identity more than ever before.

Now at 48 years of age, the latest Porsche 911 Carrera confirms its reputation as the world's greatest sports car. In this issue of In Focus, we will give you a special insight into this new generation of the sports car that has long been in the dreams of people around the world – and I am sure you will agree, from the very first glance, it remains unmistakably a 911. Design language that exudes power and elegance. Perfectly true to the illustrious 911 tradition.

Owning a Porsche is about more than just owning a sports car. Owning a Porsche is about becoming a part of history and a part of a lifestyle. With the 'Porsche Experience' currently on display in Sanlitun, Beijing, we are providing you with a vivid taste of that history and lifestyle. With the recently completed China Final of the Porsche Golf Cup, we went a step further again – and gave our lucky winners a luxurious taste of that lifestyle. Both events were a great success and more information follows in this issue of In Focus.

With winter arriving in many cities around China, I wish a season of happy and safe driving for you, your family, and your Porsche.

Best regards,

Porsche (China) Motors Limited

Mr. Helmut Broeker
Chief Executive Officer

Porsche Identity. The new 911.

For almost half a century, the noble genes of the Porsche 911 have been preserved – but an unrivalled dedication to innovation has never stopped flourishing. The new 911 Carrera models represent a completely redesigned generation of the sports car icon, exuding power and elegance like never before, while upholding the heritage that has always remained during the legendary evolution of the world's most famous sports car.

EXTERIOR

With distinctive Porsche design language, the new 911 Carrera stays true to the 911 tradition. While incorporating new, exciting contours and precisely designed details, the familiar athletic appearance of the 911 is given further dynamism with a 100 mm extension of the wheelbase, reduced height, and up to 20-inch diameter alloy wheels. At the same time, the typically compact exterior dimensions have been retained.

Seen from the front, the eye is drawn to the trademark wide-arched wings, emphasising the wider front track and making the new 911 Carrera models adopt an even sportier stance on the road. The remodelled exterior mirrors are accommodated on the upper edge of the door rather than on the mirror triangle as on previous models. Not only is this aerodynamically advantageous, it also emphasises the new design line and a visual impression of width.

INTERIOR

To complement the modern exterior, Porsche designers have created an interior style which takes its cue from that of the Porsche Carrera GT. The driver is now even more closely integrated with the cockpit, thanks to the centre console rising upwards with a high-mounted gear shift lever in typical motorsport fashion. Classic Porsche style elements are also found inside, such as an instrument cluster of five round dials, highlighted by the rev counter in the centre. On the right is a new, high-resolution multi-function screen: just one of the state-of-the-art comfort features added to meet evolving customer demands.

PERFORMANCE

Setting the standard in its class, as it has for generations, the new 911 Carrera and Carrera S raise performance and efficiency standards to new levels. Fuel consumption and emissions of both versions are up to 16 per cent lower compared with the predecessors. The 911 Carrera with a new 350 bhp 3.4-litre boxer engine and standard PDK, consumes a mere 8.2 litres per 100 kilometres based on the New European Driving Cycle (NEDC). At 194 g/km CO₂ emissions, it is the first Porsche sports car to emit below the 200 g/km mark. As for the Carrera S, with its 400 bhp 3.8-litre boxer engine, fuel consumption is also reduced by 14 per cent or 1.5 l/100 km to 8.7 l/100 km, despite the additional 15 bhp. This equates to CO₂ emissions of a mere 205 g/km.

These remarkable feats are achieved by systems such as auto start/stop, thermal management and electrical system recuperation. Additionally, the new electro-mechanical power steering not only offers the typical precision and feedback for which Porsche is renowned, but also helps increase efficiency and reduce fuel consumption.

There are other significant performance improvements in both models. The 911 Carrera S accelerates from 0 to 100 km/h in just 4.3 seconds. Pressing the Sport Plus button on the optional Sport Chrono package will cut this to only 4.1 seconds. The Carrera with PDK needs only 4.6 seconds (with Sport Plus only 4.4 seconds) to sprint from a standing start to 100 km/h.

While the new 911 offers better acceleration in a straight line, it also offers top performance at an unprecedented level across the entire dynamic repertoire. In addition to the longer wheelbase, the greater agility, precision and driving stability are based amongst other things, on the wider front track, a new rear axle and new electro-mechanical power steering.

Depending on the model, there are other standard or optional active control systems available as well, further enhancing the driving dynamics. This is especially true for the Porsche Dynamic Chassis Control (PDCC) active roll stabilisation system, available for the first time on the 911 Carrera S.

With the aesthetic appeal of the Porsche 911 and an unprecedented revolution in performance, the new 911 Carrera and 911 Carrera S have possibly achieved the most perfect combination of form and function ever offered by Porsche. Models of tradition – but more modern than ever before.

PORSCHE CARRERA CUP ASIA 2011 ENDS IN DRAMATIC STYLE.

Entering the final four rounds of this season, the adrenaline was well and truly flowing in the 2011 series of the Porsche Carrera Cup Asia. As the tension continued to build towards the final Shanghai showdown, every race had huge impact of the final results, with only precious moments separating the title winner from the rest.

Marina Bay Circuit, Singapore, 23–25 September

As a substitute driver for Team StarChase, Christian Menzel, the two-time champion of Porsche Carrera Cup Asia in 2009 and 2010, led from pole to chequered flag to take an emphatic win in Round 9. It was an emphatic win, demonstrating his extensive experience on the tight street circuit. Second across the line was SC Global Racing’s Craig Baird, followed by LKM Racing’s Keita Sawa and Darryl O’Young. While Rodolfo Avila of Team Jebesen, finished fifth, he climbed to the top of the leaderboard with his points. It was a minor lead but every little bit counted at this late stage.

The next day, Round 10 saw more domination from Menzel, who led all the way throughout the 12-lap race. Baird collected his second runner-up finish of the weekend, unable to close the 0.473 second gap with Menzel despite his best efforts. Sawa took the final podium spot and in doing so, established a precious one-point lead over Avila as the series headed to its two-race grand finale in Shanghai.

In Class B, Absolute Racing’s Jeffrey Lee completed a perfect weekend by taking both victories, but Wang Jianwei of Team BetterLife still held onto his overall leadership of the category.

Shanghai International Circuit, China, 21–23 October

Alexandre Imperatori, the Swiss ace from Team StarChase who had missed out the previous two rounds in Singapore, made a huge comeback in Round 11, claiming the pole position and charging to a dominant victory with an advantage of more than eight seconds over points-leader, Keita Sawa. Avila eventually finished third, keeping his championship hope alive. In Class B, Woyo Racing Team’s Davide Rizzo came out as the winner, but it was Team BetterLife’s Wang who made history, as he became the first ever Carrera Cup champion from Mainland China, when he clinched the Class B title placed third in his category.

So the battle for another season came down to the final race. From the start, the commanding Imperatori lead the field and immediately set about building a lead. Behind him, Sawa, Avila and Sugden roared into turn one, with Avila stunningly succeeding in passing Sawa on Lap 6. But as their battle waged on, his chances for the title were getting slimmer as Imperatori pulled further away. As the Safety Car was called to enable debris to be removed from the track, the suspense again rose. And when the race sprang back into action, Imperatori, the Swiss ace pulled away to the chequered flag. Sawa finished behind Avila in third, still in possession of the single-point lead which was enough for him to be crowned the 2011 Porsche Carrera Cup Asia Champion.

It was as close as anyone could imagine – the last battle not only proving to be a fitting grand finale to the season, but also promising more intense rivalries for the coming year. One thing is sure, the milestone tenth season of the Porsche Carrera Cup Asia, will offer more twist and turns than the Shanghai International Circuit.

PERFORMANCE PREVAILS AT THE CHINA FINAL. PORSCHE GOLF CUP 2011.

Since April, excitement and anticipation have been building at Porsche Golf Cup events around China, as the qualifying tournaments have built towards a climax with the 2011 China Final. Hosted by Porsche China and select Porsche Centres across China, the summer of top sportsmanship offered a great opportunity for Porsche enthusiasts to come together to share not only their love of sports cars, but also their love of another luxurious outdoor pursuit.

On Friday 28 October on the island of Sanya, the exclusive Intercontinental Resort hosted the winners of the 15 qualifying tournaments organised by Porsche Centres in 12 cities across China from April to September. The winners faced off at the 18-hole Luhuitou Golf Club championship golf course, with the three winners from the national final having the ultimate opportunity to represent China and their Porsche Centre at the international Porsche Nations Cup, to be held at Tegernseer Golf Club near Munich in June 2012.

Over 150 VIP guests including the 43 finalists, Porsche senior management, members of the media, sponsors, and other special guests such as Hong Kong movie star, Mr. Michael Miu, enjoyed three days of stunning weather during the competition. A selection of novelty prizes, such as Closest-To-The-Pin and Longest Drive added to the atmosphere of fun, but after a day of close competition and superior sportsmanship true to the Porsche name, three winners came out on top in each category.

“Like golf, Porsche cars are all about precision – and this timeless sport captures the essence of the Porsche lifestyle: connoisseurship and style,” said Mr. Helmut Broeker, CEO of Porsche China. “As we celebrate the close of our very successful first golf series in China, I am proud to note that we continue to raise the quality of our customer relationships in our tenth anniversary year.”

Porsche China is pleased to offer all customers more opportunities to appreciate Porsche culture, meeting new friends and immersing in an atmosphere that epitomises the Porsche values of performance excellence, and sporting style. From the moment each Porsche leaves the dealership, its owner becomes a member of an exclusive community – and this series of premium golf tournaments is just one of the ongoing range of programmes designed to reward the loyalty of this unique group.

PERFORMANCE PRINCIPLES

Porsche Sport Driving School with Arnd Stollmann

Welcome to Performance Principles, as we look at some more questions from the Porsche Sport Driving School. In this issue, Porsche China Chief Instructor, Arnd Stollmann, takes a look at the nutritional requirements for a long drive.

In every issue of In Focus, Arnd Stollmann answers a PSDS question from participant around China. To find out more about advanced driving and safety, join the Porsche Sport Driving School. For more information, please feel free to contact us at sportdrivingschool@porsche.cn.

I'm planning a long road trip. What are some dietary requirements I need to pay attention to?

~ Mr. Lin, Shanghai

Long drives can be exhausting. Nobody knows better than a race driver about the best ways to handle fatigue. Drivers need to be rested before a long drive, to ensure maximum concentration for a safe and relaxed trip. The right nutrition is also essential, as an empty stomach can not supply the necessary energy and nutrients needed for the long drive. On a road trip lasting several hours, the general rule is that all meals should be easily digestible and as energy-rich as possible.

Energy-rich foods will support concentration and endurance while not add stress to the digestive organs. To ensure the optimum energy supply for the brain to maintain a constant level of concentration, you must fill up on the right nutrient.

The most important nutrient is sugar. There is a difference between short-term and long-term sugars. Only long-term sugars will support your concentration over a long period. Examples of long-term sugars include fruits, cereals, whole-grain bread and marmalade. During a driving tour, it is necessary to also sufficiently hydrate with fruit teas or juice (1.5 – 2 litres before a drive is recommended). With low dehydration rates, the blood gets thicker and important nutrients no longer reach the brain.

A further point of note is that coffee will increase awareness, but will only take effect after 30 to 60 minutes. While energy drinks have an immediate effect, it drops quickly after 15 to 20 minutes as the body begins to require more sugar. The same applies to chocolate or dextrose.

While sitting in the car for long hours, the musculature of the stomach and intestines gets squeezed. Therefore, low-fat products like vegetables and fruits are preferred. Regardless of these factors, remember the most important thing: stop regularly, get off the car, and stretch your legs.
