THE NEW 911 GT3
LIMITS PUSHED

Dear Porsche Enthusiasts,

As the new Chief Executive Officer for Porsche China, I am delighted to present you the second issue of In Focus for 2013. The new 911 GT3 has finally arrived. Having made its stunning Asian premiere at Auto Shanghai 2013, this latest innovation from Porsche, an epitome of the 50-years heritage of the iconic 911 and the core of our DNA, now promises to push the boundary of what is possible. With improved aerodynamics, a sleeker design and more power, it guarantees every sports car enthusiast more thrilling driving experiences, on a daily basis.

Back to its birthplace – the racetrack, we also have exciting news from its sister model: the new 911 RSR which triumphed in the GT class at the 24 Hours Le Mans. On the other battleground, the 2013 Porsche Carrera Cup Asia has completed 7 action-packed rounds and will deliver more exhilarating races as it builds toward the final showdown.

For customers who have longed to experience how Porsche performs on the racetrack and improve their driving skills, Porsche Sports Driving School provides an array of new driving modules tailored to their every need. While on the open road, more breath-taking tours are offered by Porsche Travel Club to explore the scenic wonders both at home and abroad.

Finally, I am delighted to announce that the 55th Porsche Centre has opened. The brand new Porsche Centre Nanchang is evidence of our commitment to providing premium and accessible service to the ever expanding community of Porsche enthusiasts in China.

I look forward to sharing more good news with you and wish you a season of safe and pleasant driving.

Best Regards

It is a great honour to join these outstanding teams at Porsche China and across the dealer network. I am totally committed to supporting the continued growth of Porsche China and I am looking forward to the challenges ahead."

Under the leadership of Mr. Deesch Papke, we are confident that Porsche will continue to write more phenomenal chapters in the dynamic market of China.

THE NEW 911 GT3: LIMITS PUSHED.

Over ten years ago, the then-new 911 GT3 took the world by storm when it completed the fastest ever production car lap of the Nürburgring-Nordschleife, setting a bench-mark for all future sports cars. It has rewarded Porsche enthusiasts ever since, pushing the boundaries of design, performance and power.

Design

Now in its fifth generation, the all-new GT3 comes fresh on the heels of the iconic 911's 50th anniversary and two GT class wins at Le Mans. Having long ago established a reputation as the definitive circuit-bred sports car, it is set to take pole position in the marque's lineup of naturally aspirated performance autos with an entirely refitted engine, transmission, body and chassis.

Gazing upon the new 911, one feels a sense of awe and wonder. The car's design is based on the light, yet sturdy body of the current generation 911 Carrera with its hybrid steel-aluminium construction. Its wide frame, larger wheels and special front and rear design give the car greater aerodynamic performance while retaining a sleek and functional outlook. The new LED headlight option allows various functions such as dynamic cornering lights, country light and high beam.

Engine

Beauty is one thing, but what about power? Take a peek under the hood of the new 911 GT3 and be amazed. The sports car boasts a six-cylinder 3.8-liter boxer engine capable of reaching up to 9000 rpm, accelerating from zero to 100 km/h in 3.5 seconds and reaching a top speed of 315km/h. The new powerhouse is a synthesis of the previous GT3 and current 911 Carrera series engines. Featuring direct petrol injection, demand-controlled oil pump and lightweight design and materials, it weighs 25 kg less than its predecessor while delivering a bigger punch. Combined with a dual-clutch transmission system specially developed to emulate the characteristics of a motor racing sequential gearbox, the GT3 will take you on the ride of your life and elevate your heart rate to untold heights.

Drive

Power is nothing without control. That is why for the first time ever Porsche is using active rear wheel steering, allowing greater precision and lateral dynamics. Further improving handling and stability are the electronically controlled, fully variable rear differential lock, and dynamic engine mounts. Take full control of your car even at break-neck speeds. Just like its engine, the chassis of the new 911 GT3 fuses the strengths of the previous design with those of the current 911 Carrera. An extended wheelbase and wider track width mean additional increases in longitudinal and transverse stability.

Together, these features give you the ultimate sports car. Whether on the track, or for everyday use, the new 911 GT3 is an exemplary automobile. A true testament to the ingenuity of Porsche. It takes the spirit and drive of its classic predecessors, and with the help of cutting-edge technological innovations, creates something far greater.

Next, drivers headed to Inner Mongolia where they faced the technical challenges of the Ordos circuit. New Zealander Earl Bamber clinched an early Class A maiden victory in the qualifying round, taking pole position just 0.115 seconds ahead of Ragginger.

Bamber maintained the lead through rounds 6 and 7, putting him 9 points ahead of the Austrian at final count.

In a feat sure to please Chinese fans, drivers Ho Pin-Tung and Jason Zhang Zhiqiang both achieved fourth place results, missing the podium by a hair's breadth in rounds 6 and 7 respectively. ## PERFORMANCE PRINCIPLES

Porsche Sport Driving School with Chief Instructor Arnd Stollmann

Welcome to Performance Principles, as we look at some more questions from the Porsche Sport Driving School. In this issue, Porsche China Chief Instructor, Arnd Stollmann, takes a look at the proper position of the seat.

How can I properly adjust the driver's seat?

Miss Su, Beijing

The seat position is crucial to both the comfort and the performance of the driver. A good driving posture could not only alleviate the driver's fatigue, but also improve safety should an accident occur.

To position yourself properly into the seat, first sit straight in front of the steering wheel and make sure your back and bottom are square and completely fit into the seat. This position helps support your body and avoid back pain during long drives. To properly adjust the distance between your seat and the steering wheel, press the brake pedal fully with your right foot and adjusting your seat distance so that your knees should be bent about 160 degrees. Then adjusting your seat height to make sure your sight is at 2/3 of the front windshield. It gives you the most open view when driving. Now for your seat back, it should be as parallel as possible to the steering wheel. Normally the suitable angle should be an upright 110 degrees, but depending on your own stature, you can adjust the seat back to a relatively upright position and then adjust the steering to be as parallel to your back as possible.

In every issue of In Focus, Arnd Stollmann answers a PSDS question from participants around China. To find out more about advanced driving and safety, join the Porsche Sport Driving School. ## TAKE CONTROL WITH PTV PLUS

As a manufacturer that strives for innovation through cutting-edge technology, Porsche is known not only for pushing the boundaries of speed and performance, but also the drive and control of a car. We understand that when it comes to tight corners and narrow roads, all the power in the world won't help if you have a braking system anything short of world-class. That's why in the new 911 GT3, we include our Porsche Torque Vectoring (PTV) Plus as standard.

Adapted specifically for the 911 GT3, our revolutionary PTV system consists of electronically controlled, fully variable locking rear differential and selective braking interventions at the rear wheels. This gives you higher traction when driving on changing road surfaces such as rain or sleet, providing more precise cornering and increased driving stability. We also modified our steering system for the challenges of high-performance sports car driving so that steering the 911 GT3 feels the same regardless of weather conditions.

However, we could not have accomplished all this without a change of wheels. At 20 inches, the new GT3 wheels are a full inch bigger and half an inch wider than those of its predecessor. They are forged from aluminium which means not only are they stronger, but also lighter than the previous model's. Furthermore, we improved the braking system with larger breaking discs and more brake cooling ducts at the rear axle, giving you more dynamic driving performance.

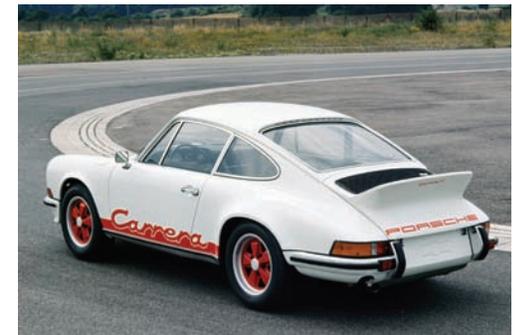

Thanks to these advances, the 911 GT3 experience is better than ever. You can take it out for a spin in rain or sunshine and sail along the highway at cruising speed, knowing our PTV system is there to back you up every step of the way.

PURE RACING LINEAGE

911 GT3 is called the "highway race car" by its fans today. Its heritage can be linked to the 911 Carrera 2.7 RS in the 1970s. Due to the racing rules in France at that time, only 500 of the 911 Carrera 2.7 RS were produced. Since then, it has been a dream car for Porsche fans all over the world. Followed by the 911 Carrera 3.0 RS and the 911 Carrera 3.8 RS, more powerful engines were applied to the 911 Carrera RS models. They have brought incredible racing experiences to that generation of Porsche fans.

In 1999, Porsche developed the first 911 GT3 based on the 911 Carrera 2.7 RS model to race in the FIA GT3 category. The engine of the first 911 GT3 was based on the original Metzger Engine design from the famous 911 GT1. With its professional engine technique and its adjustable sport chassis technology, the 911 GT3 has not only won many great races during the years, but also the hearts of many racing enthusiasts ever since it was born. Today, the newly developed 911 GT3 is equipped with a 3.8-liter boxer engine that could accelerate from zero to 100 km/h in 3.5 seconds and attaining a top speed of 315 km/h.

Born to race, the new 911 GT3 has inherited the purest racing genes of Porsche. No matter whether it's on the race track or on the road, the new 911 GT3 will bring the most thrilling racing experience to the world.

The new Porsche LMP1 sports prototype, which will compete in the sports car World Endurance Championship (WEC) and in the 24 Hours of Le Mans from 2014, successfully completed its first rollout on the Porsche test track in Weissach. Since the decision in mid-2011 to return with the LMP1 racer to top motorsport as a works effort, the Motorsport Centre at Weissach has grown significantly. A workshop and an administration building were built and accommodate around 200 employees who are responsible for the design, assembly and deployment of the LMP1 car. From the 2014 season, the racer will be fielded by a Weissach-based works squad.
